Behind every project is a story of impact, hope, and change for our planet.

Faith In Place

Environment Meets Spirituality

In 2025, Faith in Place will be celebrating their 10th Annual Environment & Spirituality (AES) Summit. With hundreds in attendance, the AES Summit connects highly engaged leaders from environmental and faith communities to learn more about conservation efforts in their regions and opportunities to promote policies that support environmental health.

Illinois Conservation Foundation

Investing in the Future

The Illinois Conservation Foundation believes the future of conservation depends on young leaders who are already making a difference. That is why, each year, they award Conservation Achievement Scholarships to high school seniors who have a proven commitment to protecting our environment. Last year, they awarded ten scholarships totaling $20,000 to outstanding students across Illinois.

Union of Concerned Scientists (UCS)

Building Science Infrastructure

Everyone in the U.S. deserves clean air, clean water, and to be protected from harmful pollutants and the effects of climate change. Union of Concerned Scientists is committed to preserving the science-based decision making that makes this possible. UCS has mobilized over 100,000 supporters to protect science, and they have developed tools and resources for federal scientists facing unprecedented challenges.

The Land Connection

Farmer Training

Through The Land Connection's Farmer Training Program, the organization was able to offer professional development grants that funded opportunities for farmers throughout the state. As a result, at least one farmer was able to attend the National Worm Farm Business Conference, which fundamentally changed their approach to farming.
